CHAPTER #02: THE PLANET OF SURPRISE

After a trip full of adventures on the red planet of Rage, our friends Wangari and Mulu were ready to continue their tour to new emotional planets.

The E-Motion Ship explained to them that their next destination would be the green planet of Surprise, while the two brothers happily adjusted their seatbelts.

With her particular grace, Stella told them: -Surprise is a place where things can change unexpectedly and we must be prepared for any type of event. Wangari and Mulu nodded cheerfully, very excited about what awaited them on this new planet.

Thus, with a loud roar of engines, the Ship pierced the darkness of space, while the brothers gazed in wonder at the stars around them.

As they got closer, Mulu exclaimed: -Woow Wangari look at those shiny bits falling from the sky, is it raining?

-They are called meteorites and are fragments of celestial bodies that fall on this planet. -The astronaut said enthusiastically.

Slowly landed in an ocean that stretched to the horizon and seemed endless. Wangari and Mulu, amazed by the beauty of the place, asked Stella: -Rain and sun at the same time? Seven bright colours in the sky one after the other? Is it a rainbow?

Yes, answered the Astronaut, staring at the group of dolphins that were jumping happily in the water.

Scanning the surface of the ocean and swimming alongside them, Stella explained the wonderful secrets of the planet of Surprise. Suddenly, Wangari heard Mulu's laughter. Hihihi I feel tickles on my feet -exclaimed her little brother when she saw tiny and colourful marine beings that caught her attention and swam towards them.

Suddenly Mr. Dolphin appeared, aquamarine green in color, with a smile and a curious look. He graciously approached them and in a very strange and noisy language yelled: -Welcome to my planet, a magical and amazing place where anything can happen.

Wangari and Mulu, delighted to meet their new friend Mr. Dolphin, began to explore the planet with joy, plunging into the depths of the ocean and discovering star-shaped sea creatures, balloons, and even a pair of horses with extensive noses and deep black eyes.

Suddenly, while they were playing with their new friend, a group of meteorites fell from the sky and caused a great wave that violently dragged them to the bottom of the sea. Wangari hugged Mulu firmly and mentally thought: -I feel afraid, my body is tense, I think we will not get out of this giant wave soon but I'll be strong and show courage to my little brother.

Micro seconds later, Stella, skilful, fast and cunning as always, pressed the green button on her spacesuit and almost magically propelled herself to the bottom of the sea, lifting the two children to the surface.

Relieved to have been rescued by her friend the Astronaut, Wangari asked Mr. Dolphin with a voice still somewhat broken and trembling: -How could you remain calm and with such control?

-Tell me the truth, didn't you feel fear and fright? To which the aquamarine creature with its usual smile replied: -Yes, for a few seconds I was afraid of what could happen, of not having control over the great wave and losing you in this immense ocean. But with confidence in myself, I recovered control of my body and asked the marine friends for help. And besides -he replied in his shrill voice- when I'm scared I always count very slowly: one, two and three.

Grateful and relieved to have survived such an intense experience, Wangari and Mulu learned a great lesson: despite how unpredictable and uncertain a planet can be, if we count to 3, think calmly, and ask for help, we will be able to face the challenges of any situation.

Without a doubt, their experience on the Surprise planet, helped them to overcome Rage and move through that emotion. With a tender kiss in the galactic helmet, Mulu thanked Stella for her company and constant protection in such a fantastic emotional adventure.

In turn, Wangari commented with relief: -I'm happy to know that even though Rage can be intimidating and Surprise unpredictable, it's always possible to learn from them. By controlling emotions we will be stronger, more creative children and capable of facing any type of challenge.

Attention Attention: our next destination is the planet of Sadness! - Said excited the astronaut, while the E-Motion Ship started its engines with a thunderous stellar sound.
